

SOLAR INSTALLERS

By using Photovoltaic technology (PV), homeowners can produce their own electricity. PV cells are devices that convert sunlight directly into electrical energy. The cost of a pv system varies, but generally costs about $10,000 for a 1,000 watt system. Larger systems cost more in total, but cost less per watt. The State of Rhode Island offers a state residential renewable energy tax credit of 25% for homeowners who install renewable energy systems on their homes. There is also a 30% federal tax credit. For more information on renewable energy tax incentives, please visit our web site at www.energy.ri.gov For more information on installing a system, contact any of the vendors listed below.
